Creating a UX Map

This is a quick reference. For more accurate information, check the tutorial included in the UX Map package or the training videos on www.ux-map.com.

• Create a new page that will contain your UX Map.
• Drag widgets from the UX Map library into your workspace and use the connector tool as 'Selection mode' to tie widgets together. It's recommended that you import the styles associated to the widgets into your project.
• Drag the widget Main navigator from the UX Map library into the canvas in order to create anchor links to navigate through different sections of the map.
• Edit the navigation labels inside the navigator.
• Drag hot spots on your map that will serve as scroll-to targets (you can use the widget called Identifier/Link to target). In the Main navigator widget, select each link and add OnClick cases to scroll to the specific hot spot it should link to.
• To include links from one section of the map to the other, use the Link to section widget.
• Add the legend to the map if you wish (it's included in the widget library).
• Drag the Main toggle widget to your map page if you wish to display the UX Map toggle icons there (recommended). Create an OnPageLoad condition to set the widget state to 'UX Map view'. If you use the default project template included in the UX Map package, this condition is already set in place.

NOTE: For better performance, it's recommended to split the UX Map into different portions, and convert each of them into standard masters ('place anywhere' drop behaviour). You will need raised events to set scroll targets from one portion of the map to another portion sitting on a different master.
